One of the best ways to avoid repair rip-offs is proper maintenance of vehicles; for example, periodically cleaning and tightening battery cables and contacts.

Awareness protects cars against repair larceny

By CLIFF ELEY and DEBBIE LINDSEY Universe Staff Writers

BYU senior has problems with car starting. After taking it into a dealership to have it repaired, he was informed that it will cost him $120 to put in a new starter. He has the work done. Two weeks later, on the way to California, he has to push start the car.

Mechanics in California find that battery cables were faulty. According to the Utah Attorney General's Consumer's Office in Salt Lake City, auto repair rip-offs are a common problem in Utah.

S. Epperson, fair trade officer, said, "It may be partly that mechanics does not require their mechanics to be licensed."

Few get 'fair deal'

According to Epperson, some 35 complaints a month are received about repair work problems. A survey by the U.S. Department of Transportation showed one has a 50-50 chance of getting a fair Epperson says that most problems with repair work are caused by neglect. "A lot of this is due to untrained mechanics," said Epperson.

According to Salt Lake City Better Business Bureau Manager Gerald Allister, a person is most susceptible to fraud when he fails to be specific about what the shop should do to his car.

The most likely candidate is the person who takes the vehicle in and says, "I have a problem with it, fix it." McAllister suggested that consumer with a problem first talk to the manager of the shop. "This is the person you should see first. Because he must rely on continued business, so he will try to resolve the problem."

BYU Ombudsman Lance Nalder maintains consumers can protect themselves against 'bad' mechanics. One way of doing this is by screening local repair shops before you need work done. "If you hear something derogatory about a business," says Nalder, "check it out."

Complaint file

The Ombudsman's Office keeps a file of complaints about area businesses. "If upon consultation of our file one finds that an excessive number of complaints have been lodged against the shop," Nalder says, "the consumer should use careful consideration before taking his car there."

Nalder also urges students to use a price comparison between shops. Prices can vary greatly from one repair shop to another. "I personally would never just go to one place," says Nalder. "Call another place and ask for an estimate."

Nalder says an estimate should include a formal list of items and charges. "Some stations will just write out a blank invoice and ask you to sign at the bottom. That's like handing them a blank check."

According to the Y Ombudsman's Office, the most frequent complaints are filed by women. He mentioned that one woman's bill for repair work included many parts that were not related to the problem. "One way to protect yourself is to know a little bit about cars," said Nalder.

Nalder feels students should be aware of even small items added to the bill which may not be necessary. "A rip-off is a rip-off, whether it's 50 cents for a screw or $300-$400 for a valve job."

There are laws to protect the consumer, if proper precautions are taken. The Utah Consumer Sales Practice Act of 1973 edicts that a repair shop must provide, on request, an estimate for any repairs that exceed $25. If the shop is going to go over the estimate by more than 10 percent, it must first get permission from the owner of the car.

'Can fight back'

Nalder stresses students do have a recourse if they feel they have been treated unfairly. "Many students think they have no alternative, but they really do," he said.

"Many students are ignorant of courts because they are afraid of them," Nalder said. "It only costs $3 to file, and $3 to summons, all refunded if you win your case."

In cases over $600, problems arise. Says Nalder, "Sadly enough, there is little recourse unless you or your parents have some money."

One way of preventing problems is by doing some of the repairs yourself. According to Lee M. Shepherd, assistant professor of industrial education, many repairs can be done by the owner with just a little instruction.

"There is no reason why an ordinary person can't learn to change the air cleaner or check spark plugs," says Shepherd. "If you learn how to do these things, you can really cut down on the cost of car repair."

U.S. government promises more fuel

By The Associated Press

The federal government promised to give California more gasoline next month and car owners elsewhere found that getting fuel can be largely a matter of being in the right place at the right time—with the right amount of money.

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown, who met with President Carter in Washington Wednesday, said the "shock, frustration and anger" in his state are just a taste of what will happen in the rest of the country.

An Associated Press spot check showed that few motorists are facing lines like the ones in California, but the supply picture across the country varies widely.

Heizer said he saw some lines at gasoline stations last weekend, but said none were very long. "I'm watching the approaching Memorial Day weekend very cautiously," he said, noting that the end of the month is worse than any other time because dealers are waiting for fresh supplies.

Price control protest

Some California station operators threatened a four-day shutdown beginning Thursday to protest federal price controls. But the drive failed to win support elsewhere and, on Tuesday, the leader of the campaign urged that it be postponed for 30 days pending action by the Energy Department which is considering relaxing the limits on how much station operators may mark up prices over the wholesale rate.

Brian Flattery, director of the North Carolina Energy Division, said the protest was "a stupid idea." He said service station operators had voluntarily reduced their operating hours, helping spread out available supplies. He also said motorists had not panicked and, thus far, the problem of long lines has been avoided.

James Hoffman, manager of the Wyoming Automobile Association, said there were only scattered reports of spot shortages. He noted, however, that stations generally are getting only 85 percent as much gasoline as they got last May and said that by the end of the month "there has to be a problem."

Bob Jacobs of the Illinois Gasoline Dealers Association said more than half of his member stations have used up more than half of their supplies already. "Over the Memorial Day weekend, I wouldn't allow my family to travel anywhere where they couldn't get there and back on one tank of gas," he said.

Spot shortages

In the Southeast, there are "spot shortages, but nothing serious," said Maurice Myers of the Georgia Motor Club. The Montana Automobile Association said its most recent survey showed "stations thought they would get adequate fuel to last through May." In Illinois, the Chicago AAA reported supplies are "definitely tightening." And in Virginia, James W. Heizer of the Gasoline Retailers Association said the situation was "very delicate." Prices in Virginia range from 73 cents a gallon for regular leaded gasoline to the low 90s for unleaded fuel. In California, where sales are rationed under an odd-even system, a gallon of unleaded goes for up to 99.9 cents, and one station in Boston is charging almost $1.05 for a gallon of unleaded gasoline.

The Lundberg Letter, an industry publication that regularly surveys prices at 16,700 gas stations, said that as of May 4, the national average price of leaded regular gasoline was 79.1 cents a gallon. The unleaded average was $3.6 cents a gallon and the average price of premium fuel was $5.6 cents a gallon.

Lowest allocation

Brown, who signed legislation Tuesday designed to force more dealers to stay open on weekends, said after meeting with Carter at the White House: "The president has said that May will be the lowest allocation of gasoline. In June, things will improve."

There were no specifics, but Rep. John Rousellot, R-Calif., quoted Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger as saying federal officials "will move as rapidly as they can" to make sure the state gets as much as it got last year.

Brown said: "California is in a state of shock, frustration, and anger. I don't think this is limited to my state. I think it is going to spread."

Conservation may hold the key to supplies in many states. Heizer said he thinks Virginia can get through the summer "if people reduce non-essential driving... but that's an awfully big if."

Expired radar license raises legal questions

By DEBBIE LINDSEY
Universe Staff Writer

A Provo City Police official admitted Wednesday that the department hasn't had a valid license to operate radar sets since September 1978.

The lack of a license may open up the question of validity of traffic tickets issued since September in case where radar was used as the sole evidence.

Captain Max Littlefield admitted that the city did not know the license needed to be renewed until a BYU law student challenged a traffic ticket case three weeks ago. The student had called the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) and found out the license had expired.

Littlefield said Monday that the department had obtained a temporary license from the FCC when its license expired, and that license ran out two weeks ago.

The BYU student, Cliff Green, a law school senior, was given a speeding citation three weeks ago and challenged it on the premise that Provo City's radar license expired Sept. 18, 1978.

Littlefield told him at the time of the appeal that the city's understanding was that the licenses were automatically renewed, Green said.

Littlefield said he told the Universe that Provo Police had a temporary license to avoid a lot of problems.

"We operated the radar not knowing that the license was expired," he said.

Provo City Attorney Glen Ellis said that in his opinion the absence of a valid license would not negate traffic citations.

"Whether or not they have a FCC license doesn't invalidate the result of the radar. It doesn't have anything to do with it," he said. "That's like saying if the police officer's driver's license has expired, he cannot write tickets."

Ellis said if the driver had paid the fine without contesting it in court, as the majority of drivers do, they would have no grounds to challenge it. When the fine is paid, the driver pleads guilty to the offense, he said.

Another employee in the city attorney's office said they had received many calls asking about the validity of tickets given during the time the city was without a radar license.

If there was other evidence besides radar involved in the citation, the challenge would not stand up in court, he added.

When asked what would happen if an appeal was made or if the ticket was less than 30 days old, he said, "I don't know — we don't have a case yet."

However, law student Green said that he is considering bringing a class action suit against the city.

In the meantime, Provo City will be licensed again in 10 days, Littlefield said.

"Three weeks ago we received a verbal temporary license, but since it was not written, we decided not to use the radar," he said.

"I want to make it clear," Littlefield said, "that we had no knowledge that we were using it illegally."

Week 'professionalism'

Litster-Cox report on first weeks

Editor's note: ASBYU President Dave Litster and Vice President Kim Cox were interviewed by Universe Staff Writer David Jenkins. Excerpts from that interview follow.

Universe: Now that the election is over and you've had a couple of weeks to adjust to your offices, do you have any first impressions that you would like to share?

Litster: The position is very humbling. I enjoy it very much. We have a tremendous council with a spirit of unity. I feel we can become a much more effective voice of the students and be a good organization in the eyes of the administration. The administration is taking effective steps to give us a more direct link with them.

Cox: It's really exciting to see the programs taking shape and several of our campaign promises implemented.

Universe: The other day I asked you if she had any questions to ask Dave Litster. Her response was "What is Dave Litster?" What do you think he will do this coming year so that we all can know who you are?

Litster: 1. Fulfill our campaign promises. 2. Make us more visible by working down on the main floor of the Student Center. Once a week we will have a "Speak-easy" where we will talk to students on a one-to-one basis, instead of being up on the fourth floor. 3. We will have our action report that we will be doing and we will be able to give personal statements through this report.

Universe: What have you done so far to fulfill your campaign promises?

Litster: We have implemented a zero-based budget for the spring and summer terms. That will also apply in the fall. We are making improvements in the court system. Those improvements haven't been made yet but there is a committee to draft them. We are beginning the speak-easy this Thursday. We met with the housing board last Thursday to present to them the services that are offered to the students. We have also let them know of the survey that we are taking to inform the students of the facilities offered. We have taken steps so that we can publish the agenda of the Executive Council meeting so they (the students) can be aware of what is going on and where the council meeting is to be held.

Universe: What are your responsibilities as president of the ASBYU?

Litster: 1. Preside over the Executive Council. 2. Preside over appointments of the court system. 3. Host dignitaries visiting campus. 4. I am a member of the Intercollegiate Organization. 5. Liaison with Provo City. 6. Responsible for on-campus housing.

Universe: What are the responsibilities of the executive vice president?

Cox: 1. Assist office of the ASBYU President. 2. Responsible for representatives for university committees. 3. Sak-Yak. 4. Representative for on-campus housing. 5. Office manager. 6. Married students. 7. Security liaison.

Litster: BYU is unique in that we have both administrative and legislative responsibilities.

Universe: What benefits are provided by the university for the office of ASBYU president and executive vice-president?

Litster: They pay our tuition, $50 for books each semester and also a monthly stipend. We are required to put in at least 20 hours a week. We are not allowed to have any other part-time job. We also must be full-time students.

Universe: What contributions do you think you can make as president of ASBYU that your predecessors have not?

Litster: One thing is to be a more effective voice of the students and have regular contact with the students with the speak-easy and then reporting back to the students with our action report.

Cox: This will help us in representing correctly the student's views. This is important because this year's council is more concerned with student problems than in the past.

Universe: What are your impressions of the administration?

Litster: We have not yet worked with Pres. Oaks. However the president has established a new channel through which we can work with the administration. We now work directly with the Office of Student Life.

Universe: What is the budget of ASBYU?

Litster: $305,000.00.

Universe: Who decides how it is spent?

Litster: The ASBYU offices submit budget requests which are reviewed by a Financial Review Board which then must be approved by the Executive Council. The request is then sent to the dean of Student Life for approval. We request the offices not to pad their budgets. Rather it is recommended that they make additional requests for monies when the need arises.

Universe: Many students who I've talked with feel that there is a credibility gap with ASBYU officers. Any comments?

Litster: We plan to keep our campaign promises. Our action report is to be published in the Daily Universe.

Universe: Last spring Perry Bratt said the administration is what governs the students and not the ASBYU. Will student officers ever be given more authority?

Cox: We will receive more authority as we become more professional.

Litster: The Bratts established a good credibility with the administration. We plan to build on that. The new channel of authority through the office of the dean of Student Life gives us more authority than we have had before.

Universe: Will there be a calendar of events published for spring and summer?

Litster: No. But 'What's Happening' in the Daily Universe will contain what's going on.

USSR to disrupt US-Saudi ties

The Soviet Union will make every effort to exploit the rift in delicate relations between Saudi Arabia and the United States, Western analysts in Washington say.

According to diplomatic sources, the Soviets — who have no diplomatic relations with Saudi Arabia — have been in contact with the Saudis recently through third parties, said to be Morocco and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Eviction suit filed

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Douglas A. Wallace, an excommunicated Mormon dissident from Vancouver, Wash., says he has filed a federal lawsuit seeking to evict the LDS from Temple Square in Salt Lake City.

Wallace said Monday he has filed the suit with U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia demanding that the site occupied by the Mormon Temple, Salt Lake Tabernacle and two visitor centers be "restored to its original condition — sagebrush."

Wallace says Mormon pioneer leader Brigham Young got the land fraudulently by executing deeds to the property to himself as trustee of the church in violation of trust laws.

Solar home completed

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (AP) — An experimental solar energy house is now complete and in operation in Idaho Falls.

Built with a Department of Energy contract by EG&G, and Boise Cascade Corp., the house features a built-in solar heating system for a portion of the cost of present systems.

Described as simple and cost effective, the house is heated by an active air-type solar collector system composed of 28 panels covering almost the entire south side of the building, said Peter Scofield, manager of EG&G's energy program.

"The solar system costs between $4,000 and $5,000 to build for a 1,400-square-foot Boise Cascade home, compared with the $10,000 typically required for add-on systems," he said.

STATE

Gas plan ready

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Standby mandatory gasoline controls have been proposed for Utah by the state Energy Conservation and Development Council, but Gov. Scott Matheson says he hopes they won't be needed.

The proposals include gasoline rationing and a California odd-even system for gas purchases. Matheson said he would formally announce the plan Thursday. Energy Office director Reed Searle said the federal government required the state to set up the plan or have one imposed.

The proposal would set a minimum amount for gasoline purchases, so motorists won't be able to top off their tanks when they don't really need gas.

Student appeal denied

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — First District Court Juvenile Court Judge L. Kent Backman will sentence Thursday four Mound Fort Junior High School boys who were found guilty of forcible sexual abuse.

The boys were found guilty of the charge last week. Bud Brumley, the intake officer who handled the case, said the boys were convicted of forcible touching, pinching and grabbing of the breast and genital areas of an eighth grade girl.

Brumley said the girl tried to evade the boys. The four students, one black and three Hispanics, were suspended from school in February after being accused in the incident.

University, communications department honors prominent journalism educator

A prominent journalism educator was honored by the BYU and the Department of Communications Tuesday. Dr. Howard Rusk Long, past director of Southern Illinois University — Carbondale's School of Journalism, was presented with a Meritorious Service Award at a luncheon held in his honor.

Long was honored because of his service and dedication to the field of journalism and journalism education. Dr. Dallas M. Burnett, former chairman of the Department of Communications, made the presentation on behalf of the university and the Communications Department.

Long, who was graduated in 1930 with bachelor degrees in journalism and English, started his journalism career by working in a newspaper mailroom while in high school.

Before getting involved in the field of journalism education, Long had gained experience from many sources. Some of these included working as a reporter for the Associated Press, editor of the Missouri Showme Magazine, and member of the Missouri Press Association.

After accepting award Long thanked those present and said that his work in the field of journalism had been worth all the effort he had put into it.

Mountain Bell and Weber State College make music together.

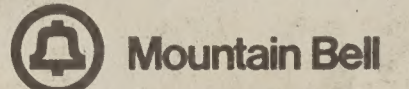

Mountain Bell and Weber State College are proud to be associated with the June 14th Ogden appearance of the world-renowned New York Philharmonic, conducted by Andre Kostelanetz. This special appearance, presented by Weber State, is part of the Bell System American Orchestras on Tour program.

The symphony orchestra tour program continues a long Bell System tradition. Since 1940, when we first began to sponsor the "Bell Telephone Hour," we've felt that enhancing America's quality of life through sponsorship of fine music was among our responsibilities to the communities we serve.

The four year symphony orchestra tour program continues to meet that responsibility by extending the reach of great symphony orchestras beyond their resident concert halls to greater numbers of people.

The Ogden performance of the New York Philharmonic, at Dee Events Center on the Weber State campus, will include Stravinsky's Firebird Suite, Tchaikovsky's 1812, and Rachmaninoff's Rhapsody on a Theme of Paganini with John Browning, piano soloist.

Tickets may be purchased at the Dee Events Center from 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m., Monday through Friday, or by calling (801) 626-6550.

'Gospel-oriented' learning set for summer workshops

By CRAIG NELSON
Universe Staff Writer

A new "gospel-oriented" method of learning will be taught at BYU during the summer semester.

According to Dr. Vernon J. Tipton, professor of Zoology, this new method will be taught in conjunction with the 1979 Faculty Workshop and will be directed by Dr. Walter A. Gong, professor of Natural Science at San Jose State University.

Tipton said Gong has developed insights into learning that have a gospel orientation.

"He sees the problem in our conventional system," said Tipton, "in which students see themselves only as learners and teachers as teachers."

In the conventional system of learning there are only two people involved, the teacher and the student, Tipton said. With this new method, after the student learns the material from the teacher he must pass it on to someone else.

"When we get information we share it, so we grow tenfold," he said. "It's like the parable of the sower."

The workshop will teach both students and teachers to be learners as well as teachers, he said.

"It is as though this were one huge research project with both students and teachers in search of how to do something," Tipton said. "Students can be better students and teachers can be better teachers by joining in this search."

This method, humorously called the Gong show, was developed by Gong and is based on the principle of learning in order to teach.

"A team of five to eight teachers work together on a topic of their choice until it is their best effort," explained Tipton. "The teacher will then present it to faculty and students who will attempt to capture as much as they can."

"The students will need to expand the information they receive and then teach it to their families or in church," he said. "This will provide a motivation to capture as much as they can."

"The major difference between the conventional system and this new method," said Tipton, "is the commitment of the people involved to bless other people by increasing their knowledge."

The workshop will be open to students, faculty and the public, with two hours of credit available for students. Upper-division and graduate classes will be offered in the colleges and departments of Fine Arts and Communications, Bio-Ag, Education, History and University Studies. Interested students should contact Vernon Tipton, 785 WIDB, or Dillon Inouye, W-153C STAD.

Dialects divulge plenty but Americans 'ignurnt'

Editor's note: This is the second in a series of articles concerning various aspects of the English language and the views of Don Norton, specialist in English usage. Part two examines English dialects.

By LEE WARNICK
Universe Staff Writer

"Please put my tackies over by the settee."
"Would you please repeat that, this time in English?"
"Please put my runners over by the chesterfield."
"I still didn't catch it."
"Please put my sneakers over by the couch."
"That's better."

The difference between these requests? None. Yet, the first would get you quick action in South Africa, the second, would get an understanding ear in Canada, and the third, would get your tennis shoes moved in Utah.

If English is just one language, why are there so many different ways to speak it? The study of dialects, the variations in language between one place and another, provides the answers.

One of Don Norton's specialties is dialects, and the BYU English assistant professor has some interesting opinions concerning them.

'Profound ignorance'

"There's really a profound ignorance on the part of the public when it comes to dialects. It's deplorable. Very, very few people know anything solid or accurate about them."

A multitude of popular misconceptions exist concerning dialects, Norton says. "Take the Southern drawl, for instance. It has nothing to do with laziness or laxness on the part of the speaker, as many think. Southerners simply pronounce some vowels differently than we do. We've come to realize that it is not an uneducated speech, but simply a different way of speaking."

The Southern dialect did not come about from black slave influence as some believe, but rather from people settling in the South who came from different linguistic regions in England.

Incorrect assumptions

The assumption that each geographical area, such as the South or Northeast, has just one dialect is also mistaken, adds Norton. "There are dozens of distinctive Southern dialects, and in New England another 20 or 30. In the West, everywhere you go there are local dialects."

Many Americans think of dialects in terms of people in other regions, Norton says, not realizing that they themselves speak a dialect. "In one of my classes, I ask students to write down the name of the person they know best who speaks a dialect of American English. About half of them put down someone else's name. They don't realize that they are the person they know best. Everyone speaks a dialect. Some are just more conspicuous than others."

The misconceptions even stretch to Utah, mainly because of another problem: "There has been no systematic study done on Utah that is readily available. Most of what has been done is unreliable."

Little of Utah's dialect can be considered "original," says Norton. "Our dialect is largely an extension of one Eastern Seaboard dialect, called North Midland. People in Connecticut in most ways speak very much as we do."

Even without an official study, some words are known to be unique to Utah and surrounding areas. "One is 'sluff,' meaning to deliberately avoid going to a class. I've never heard anyone else use the word in that context."

'Oh for ignurnt'

Another popular word, especially among girls, is 'ignurnt.' They usually use it referring to boys: 'Oh those ignurnt boys.' The 'Oh for' construction is also popular among adolescent girls: 'Oh for ignurnt,' 'Oh for dumb,' 'Oh for rude.'

One word common to rural Great Basin areas, according to Norton, is "borrow pit." While most people would say, "The car ran off the road and into the ditch," people in this region often say, "The car ran off the road and into the borrow pit." "Borrow pit" is an engineering term which means to borrow dirt to make a road-bed.

Other factors may also have an influence in the dialect: "Utahns, unlike many people elsewhere, are very strongly oriented to compass directions. This is largely because of the addressing system. Directions in Utah are often given with compass points: 'Go north for two miles, then turn east.' In many other places, everything is oriented to 'left' or 'right'."

At least one Utah pronunciation is unique: "In many parts of rural Utah, words are pronounced this way: 'harse' for horse, 'carn' for corn, 'Book of Mar-mon', 'narth' for north, and so forth. One linguist said the only other place he found this pronunciation was Southern Indiana. "Anyone who has social aspirations tries to eliminate this pronunciation. That's too bad, because there's intrinsically nothing wrong with it."

Origin indicators

Pronunciation of certain words can indicate the origin of one's dialect. Try pronouncing the following words:

Greasy: If you pronounced it "GREE-see" you are from the North, if "GREE-zee," from the South.

Peony (the flower): pee-OH-nee is Great Basin, PEE-uh-nee general elsewhere.

Cot, caught: if pronounced differently, from the South, or East.

Marry, merry, Mary: If you pronounce merry and Mary the same, but marry differently, you are from the East. If you pronounce all three the same, you are from the West.

Unique dialect

In a dialect survey conducted recently by Norton, a number of dialects were uncovered, but none was quite so unique as the one from South Africa. There, corn bread is called "mealie bread," a "cold drink" is a soft drink, and tennis shoes are "tackies." Their answer to sluff is to "bunk school." A "foot-long" is a submarine sandwich, and if you were calling to some friends down the street, you'd more than likely say "Hey, you blokes!"

Dialects, though they are fascinating to study and are a key to understanding the culture of people in different regions, may be going the way of many American traditions. Norton says: "Dialects are waning because of urbanization and the mass media. Regional influence is no longer as strong."

And just when we learned where to put the tackies.

Classrooms are brought to students

Traveling professors supervise graduate studies by bringing the classroom to the students in an effort to make it easier for students to fulfill requirements without making a substantial time investment.

The Intern Doctoral Program (IDP) offered by the BYU College of Education is designed to provide advanced graduate experience and study to educational practitioners with a minimum of disruption of their careers.

Dr. Wayne Shute, director of BYU's Intern Doctoral Program said, "There isn't another university in this country taken in total that has an Intern Doctoral Program."

"The individuals can continue to work while they go through the program," Shute said. The advantages of the program are four-fold, Shute pointed out. First the candidates "can work while they go through the program;" second the program is "very humane and personalized;" third "we involve them in the development of their curriculum;" and fourth "it is very rigorous, they have to put out."

"It's the only program for me," said Virginia Creighton, a full-time instructor of business at San Francisco Community College District and first-year student in the program. "I have full confidence BYU will do everything to help me. The biggest help is that professors come to us and give us strength to complete the program."

"I think it (BYU) is A No.-1," said Don Brockett, a second-year student and instructor of health education at Moorpark College, Camarillo, Calif. "I heard about the IDP from a colleague. My goal was to get my doctorate before I am 40. I think I'll make it."

Four sequences are offered in the IDP, Shute pointed out. They are Educational Administration, Educational Psychology, Elementary Education and Secondary and Higher Education.

Two major projects are required of candidates, according to Shute. One is "professional project which is very practical and relates to their jobs" and the other a "dissertation which is theoretical research."

The IDP has been an on-going program of refinement conceived by Curtis N. Van Alfen, dean of the College of Education, in 1970.

The IDP is fully accredited by the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education and the Northwest Association of Secondary and Higher Education.

Friends support Y with cash donations

During the fiscal year 1977-78, the American people donated $35 billion to charitable causes, and some of this landed at BYU, by way of the Development Office.

Paul Schneider, associate director-communications for the LDS Development Office at BYU, said the office is concerned primarily with "raising philanthropic funds, as well as developing support for educational programs."

According to Schneider, there were 79,424 individual contributions to BYU during the period of 1977-78.

When asked what is done with the donations, Schneider stated they were used in the manner specified by the donor. However, if the donor has not yet decided how his money is to be used, it is invested and later drawn when the donor has decided. In this way the funds do not remain idle.

"The loyal sources of support are parents of students, alumni members and friends of the University, as well as corporations," Schneider said. "About one half of our contributions come from non-members. The reason for this is that the non-members are interested in our moral standards and patriotism."

The largest amount of donations are made by the friends of the university with 71.5 percent of the total donations.

Concert in quad promotes service

A free concert will be presented Saturday night at the ELWC Memorial Lounge from 8 to 10 p.m.

The concert, sponsored by the ASBYU Student Community Services Office, and co-sponsored by the Culture and Social offices, will feature The White Brothers and Randy Mundy.

The folk rock musicians are performing together for the first time, and are donating the concert for the promotion of "service towards others," Paul McKean, vice-president of Student Community Services said. Incidental expenses will be paid by the three ASBYU offices.

"I wanted to use advertising money to benefit the students," McKean added.

Jeff and John Whiteley are both BYU graduates who often played here while students. They've just completed a five-month tour of Europe.

Randy Mundy is from Kansas and came to Utah to begin his musical career.

de Jong papers, books donated to Y by widow

The BYU Library and university departments were recipients of personal book collections and professional papers of the late Dr. Gerrit de Jong, Jr.

The de Jong papers, which span the years 1916 — 1974, were donated by Mrs. Alma de Jong, widow of Dr. de Jong.

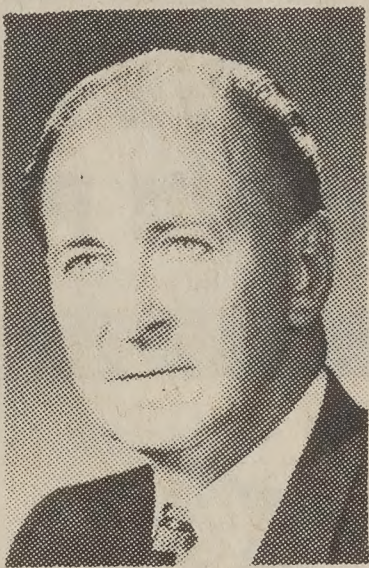

Dr. de Jong, former dean of the College of Fine Arts, was a distinguished music composer, pianist, linguist, teacher and administrator. A native of Amsterdam, Holland, he was a convert to the LDS Church. Dr. de Jong came to the United States with his family in 1906.

Before joining the BYU faculty, Dr. de Jong served on faculties at Murdock Academy at Beaver and the LDS University at Salt Lake City. He was also noted as a distinguished author, and wrote many books and manuals on language, music, literature and LDS Church doctrine.

The de Jong papers, which will be preserved in the University Archives, consist of personal correspondence and writings, manuscripts of his music compositions, biographical material and addresses he delivered.

'Jesus Christ sets the standard,' Elder Derrick tells Y students

Understanding Jesus Christ is the first step to understanding one's potential, Elder Royden G. Derrick of the First Quorum of the Seventy of the LDS Church, told BYU students at Tuesday's devotional.

Elder Derrick said "He (Jesus Christ) sets the standards, he makes up the rules by which we must live, he sets the value system; if we will perform our duty and assist Him in building His kingdom we will receive rewards far beyond our fondest hopes."

The speaker admonished students to give of themselves, never aspire for positions in the church and do everything to a standard of excellence so when we are called to serve the Lord, it can be done in a way that will be acceptable to him.

God set the value system, he said. "When we realize and understand our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, we can come to understand the potential we are living for."

Elder Derrick said the only person to determine values is Jesus Christ. "There is only one person who has that right and it is He who created the worlds. You see, if everyone determines what is right and what is wrong, we would have so many different value systems we could not possibly be 'one' as Jesus Christ commissioned us to be."

Elder Derrick quoted scriptures about the creation and Jesus Christ as the creator. "Now I submit to you there was never a man who ever made such a claim of being the creator of the worlds and backed it up as with such authority as did Jesus Christ."

On Cougars' home field

Y meets Aztecs for title

By RUSS DAVIS
Universe Sports Writer

The Western Athletic Conference Baseball championship goes up for grabs this weekend as the Cougars of BYU host the Aztecs of San Diego State.

BYU, winner of the Northern Division, will battle first-year WAC member San Diego State in a best two-of-three series on the Cougars' diamond. The winner of the series will advance to the Central Regionals in Austin, Texas, as the WAC champion.

The Cougars of BYU warmed up for the weekend encounter with San Diego by downing the University of Utah 10-2. In Tuesday's game with the Utes, BYU's baseball coach, Gary Pullins, used nine pitchers.

"We weren't going to deviate from our plan," said Pullins, in describing the use of a different pitcher for each inning. "We wanted to look at all of them, but we are more concerned with Bert Bradley, Tom Morris, Axle Hardy and Rob Blyth because they are the core of our pitching staff."

"We weren't going to deviate from our plan," said Pullins, in describing the use of a different pitcher for each inning. "We wanted to look at all of them, but we are more concerned with Bert Bradley, Tom Morris, Axle Hardy and Rob Blyth because they are the core of our pitching staff."

Tuesday's win over Utah left the Cougars with a 16-1 conference record and 46-22-1 overall.

San Diego State concluded its regular season last week with a surprising 11-6 upset over No. 1 ranked UCLA. The Aztecs scored five runs in the top of the 10th to record their 52nd victory of the year against only 14 defeats.

As far as overall records are concerned, BYU and SDSU start all over when they step onto the diamond Friday. It's a whole new season and the win-loss totals stand at 0-0.

In previous games this season between the Aztecs and the Cougars, SDSU has taken 13-5, 10-9 and 11-10 decisions from BYU. In fact, the Cougars have beaten the Aztecs only once in their 10 confrontations and that was in 1966 when they won 8-7 in San Diego.

"...One team could blow the other right out of the park."

This is the Cougars' 13th consecutive appearance in the WAC baseball championships. The Cougars last won the WAC title in 1971 when they downed Arizona State 3-0 and 10-4, BYU finished fifth in the NCAA that year.

With Arizona and Arizona State competing in the PAC-10, this year's WAC championship will be a first — the first time BYU hasn't faced a team from Arizona for the league crown. In the previous 12 WAC baseball playoffs, the Cougars have gone 6-26 against the Arizona schools.

"This year's playoff should be exciting," said Coach Pullins. "Both clubs (BYU and SDSU) are good hitting teams. You could describe them as exceptional hitting teams."

Dispute settled on umpire issue

NEW YORK (AP) — Major league umpires are expected to return to work this weekend under terms of an agreement that the Associated Press learned was reached between their union and the two leagues Tuesday.

Details of the agreement ending the dispute that has kept the regular umpires on the sidelines since spring training were presented to a joint meeting of the major leagues in Chicago today. The settlement is expected to be announced officially today.

Both the National and American Leagues denied that any final settlement had been reached but confirmed that talks were making progress.

"We still have a way to go," said American League President Lee McPhail. "I would prefer not to discuss the issues."

But McPhail agreed that the atmosphere between the two sides had improved considerably.

Richie Phillips, attorney for the umpires, said, "We are on the threshold of reaching a comprehensive agreement between the umpires and major league baseball which should satisfy all parties and insure labor peace for at least three years and beyond."

Terms of the settlement were unavailable, although it was understood that as part of it, the leagues had agreed to employ an extra crew of umpires, allowing each of its officiating units to have some time off during the regular season.

"SDSU's hitting has to concern us," explains Pullins, "they are the only team we've seen that hits as well as we do. But if our pitching holds them down, or vice versa, then it could be a blow-out."

"Consequently, it isn't hard to imagine close games like the 11-10 game we played in Provo," said Pullins. "Or, depending on the pitching, one team could blow the other right out of the park. But even with good pitching, we'll probably see a lot of runs scored."

Friday's pitching matchup will put BYU's Bert Bradley (11-1) against SDSU's strikeout ace Bud Black (7-1). Other than Black, SDSU will use Curt Burkhead (10-0) and Scott Hergott (7-3) in the team's pitching rotation. BYU will counter with Tom Morris (6-2) and Axle Hardy (6-2).

"I feel one of the best things we have had going for us this year is our schedule and the fact that many of our players have had previous playoff experience," said Pullins. "All of our pitchers, with the exception of Dave Beck and Scot Nebeker, have been in the playoffs. Even Mike Davis and Mike Render have had playoff experience at the JC level."

"SDSU is more beatable than the Arizona State teams have been in the past two years," added Pullins. "SDSU runs well and hits well. They usually play good defense and we'll have to equal them in those areas to polarize them."

"No question, playing in Provo is to our benefit. We play well when we are at home. SDSU has played their very best against us, but we haven't played our best against them," Pullins added.

"We are just starting to play our best in the last three weeks," Pullins said. "Overall, we're peaking and we have had some real team victories in the WAC."

Both BYU and SDSU have played seven common opponents. In comparison, BYU stands 9-5-1 and SDSU, 18-3, against these common foes.

Friday's game is scheduled to start at 3 p.m.; Saturday's, at 1 p.m. If a third game is necessary it will be played right after Saturday's first game.

SuperSonics deadlocked with Phoenix

SEATTLE (AP) — The Seattle SuperSonics are grateful for second chances. They plan to make the most of the extra life they were given by the Phoenix Suns in the National Basketball Association Western Conference finals.

"Game seven is history," said Sonics forward Paul Silas prior to the showdown at the Seattle Kingdome. "They're going to be a little tentative today, just like we were on their court for game six."

In the sixth game on Sunday, Phoenix had several shots at clinching the series in the final seconds only to fail and allow the Sonics to knot things at three games apiece.

Los Angeles Lakers will choose 'Magic'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Earvin Johnson has worked magic wherever he's played basketball, and the Los Angeles Lakers hope his ball-handling sorcery will transform them into a National Basketball Association power.

The Lakers announced Wednesday that they'd reach contractual agreement with "Magic" Johnson, confirming they will take the Michigan State sophomore as the first pick in the National Basketball Association draft. Johnson announced last Friday that he was declaring hardship and would enter the June 25 draft.

The contract will not be signed until after the draft, and terms were not disclosed. But it has been reported that the Lakers will pay the 19-year-old Johnson $600,000 annually for four years.

"I'm happy and excited to be here," Johnson said after being introduced at a press conference. "I probably wouldn't have come out of the hardship draft if this team hadn't wanted me. The Lakers have one of the best centers in the league in Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and it's an outstanding organization."

Johnson, a 6-foot-8, 200-pounder who played mostly at pointguard for the NCAA champion Spartans this past season, said he prefers to play the point but will gladly play wherever the Lakers want him.

"I feel whatever they want me to do, that's what I'll do," said Johnson, who smiled broadly throughout the press conference.

"If they want me to share the point guard with Norm (Nixon), that'll be okay, and if I play the off guard, that'll be fine, too."

Johnson said he'd watched the Lakers on television and sized up the team. "They've got a dominating center, and the other players don't really have to do a lot; I think they started to run more at the end of this season, and that's what I'd like to see them, us, do more — run with the ball, then set up and go in to the big guy whenever we can't fastbreak."

Lakers Coach Jerry West, who apparently remains undecided whether he'll remain with the Lakers next season, said Johnson and Nixon could provide Los Angeles with a great backcourt duo.

"They're both tremendously quick," said West, who was one of the NBA's best guards ever. "They're two players who can beat a press in a hurry, and that's very important."

A gifted passer and playmaker, Johnson averaged 17 points, 7.3 rebounds and 8.4 assists a game in leading the Spartans to the NCAA championship.

Asked about his nickname, Johnson said a sports writer tagged it on him after he'd led his Lansing, Mich., high school team to a big upset over a rival. Johnson went on to work his magic at Michigan State, which improved from a 10-17 record the season before his arrival to 25-5 and 26-6 his two seasons at the school.

Mears qualifies last, but gets top position

DIANAPOLIS (AP) — The first to qualify last and the last first, or so the saying is. Based on the first weekend qualifying for the May 27 Indianapolis 500, there might be something to that.

In a somewhat ironic turn of events, the man out in the first round of qualifying, Rick Mears, became the fastest qualifier and will start first in the million race. And the day's first attempt to qualify, Joe Saldana, wound up being the last out of 25 to qualify.

The final weekend of qualifying races, those still without spots in the race had no illusions about where they will start — last — regardless of how fast they qualify.

Several in that group have high hopes of running well enough in the race to pull off a rare last-to-first win.

Leading the list is speedster Danny Sullivan, who is still on the mend after suffering a concussion and whiplash Saturday in a mean crash during practice. His car was destroyed, but Sullivan has been busy bringing his race car machine up to standard.

Sullivan had been one of the favorites to win the pole position, which was locked up in the first-round qualifying.

Doctors expected Ongais to be well enough to return to driving chores today.

Meanwhile, stock car specialist Neil Bonnett was waiting patiently Tuesday at home in Hueytown, Ala., while his crew members tried to build one solid engine from three that haven't been able to hold together too long so far this year. His teammate Roger McCluskey is also waiting on mechanical refinements before he can qualify.

Hurley Haywood, the endurance racing veteran, had his car going well enough to qualify last weekend, but problems developed on the car of his teammate, Johnny Parsons, who took over Haywood's car and qualified ninth, the fastest four cylinder-powered car in the field.

Teams that qualified cars last weekend have so far used this week to work out fuel mileage and handling problems. If they get those concerns behind them, they will have the luxury of setting up their backup cars for possible qualification attempts.

Backup cars that might be brought out to qualify the final weekend include those of A.J. Foyt, Tom Sneva, Mike Mosley, Bobby Unser and Tom Bigelow.

Veteran of 16 pro seasons, Kilmer released by Redskins

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bill Kilmer, the 16-year veteran quarterback known for his wobbly pass and a steady heart, was given his release Tuesday by the Washington Redskins.

Kilmer, who will be 40 when the 1979 National Football League season rolls around, was caught up in the Redskins' youth movement which last week released of linebacker Chris Hanburger a couple months after defensive end Ron McDole was released.

Kilmer, however, had one year remaining on his contract, estimated at between $225,000 and $280,000. The others were not under contract.

General Manager Bobby Beathard, who called Kilmer earlier Tuesday to notify him, said, "We're fully aware of our obligation to Billy and we're prepared to honor that contract."

Coach Jack Pardee, who played with Kilmer on the 1972 Super Bowl team, said, "We felt we should devote our time and attention the final two months prior to training camp to Joe Theismann, Kim McQuilken and Gary Valbuena, a free agent we signed Monday."

Kilmer, an All-America at UCLA in 1960, started his career as a shotgun-style quarterback with San Francisco. In 1967, he was selected by New Orleans in the expansion draft, after missing both the 1963 and 1965 seasons.

He became a Redskin Jan. 28, 1971.

Y enters NCAA

Seeded 16th in a field of 16 teams, Brigham Young University's tennis team will represent the Western Athletic Conference and the region in the NCAA Championships which begin Monday at the University of Georgia.

"The seeding may not sound very flattering," admitted Coach Larry Hall, "but I can tell you we're honored to be among the teams selected for the tournament."

UCLA, a team the Cougars lost a 7-2 match to earlier in the season, has been listed as the number one seed. Trinity was seeded second, and the other main contenders will be Stanford, USC and Southern Methodist.

"The Bruins were missing one of their regular players when we met them in Los Angeles," said Hall, who helped guide the Cougars to a surprisingly strong 21-2 record this year. "But it's a different thing when they are missing a player and we are missing a player."

"UCLA's second team would give our first team a good match," Hall added.

BYU was selected to represent the region on the strength of the Cougars' overall record this season, plus the fact they tied for the WAC championship with Utah.

In addition to the team competition, there will be singles and doubles action to determine NCAA champions. Eric Peterson, WAC champion in the number one singles, will compete in that division, and Peterson will team with Mike Tammen in the doubles.

A total of 64 players will be involved in the individual competition, including Peterson and four other players from the Western Athletic Conference.

Peterson is the only senior on the six-member team making the trip to Athens, Ga.

This is coach Hall's first season as the Cougars' head tennis coach.

Tri-conference meet features Y tracksters

Seven members of BYU's track and field team will compete in a tri-conference meet in Austin, Texas, Saturday.

Teams from the Western Athletic Conference, Southwest Conference, and Southeastern Conference will battle in the meet.

The seven Cougar athletes entered are Larry Lawrence, steeplechase; Jari Keihias, javelin; Lloyd Jones, 110-meter hurdles; Rafael Echavarria, 110 and 400 hurdles; Brent Hamblin, 800 meters; Kim Nielson, high jump; and Chris Child, pole vault.

Lawrence, Keihias, and Child have qualified for the national championships in their events, while Echavarria has qualified in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles. Echavarria and Jones will attempt to qualify for nationals in the 110-meter hurdles, which has a qualifying standard of 13.96. Echavarria has achieved a time of 14.03 this season while Jones has a 14.08 time.

Hamblin's best time in the 800 meters this year is 1:49.69, forty-nine hundredths slower than the qualifying standard.

Nielson, who has been suffering from an injury this season, needs to jump three and a half inches higher than his season's best of 6-10 to qualify for the NCAA meet.

The tri-conference meet is set up to give athletes a chance to compete during the four weeks between the conference championships and the national championships.

From the Southeastern Conference are three teams that placed in the top 20 in last year's NCAA championships. Auburn placed fifth, Alabama 13, and Tennessee 17.

The best any Southwest Conference team could do in the 1978 nationals was Texas A&M, which tied for the number 23 position.

Leading athletes from these two conferences include Pat Davey, Tennessee, third in last year's 10,000-meter run finals; James Walker, Auburn, 1978 400-meter hurdles champion; hurdler Dennis Otono, Mississippi State; Maxwell Peters, Alabama, fifth in the NCAA triple jump last year; and javelin thrower Frank Lyons of Texas.

The NCAA championships will be held June 1-2 at Champaign, Ill.

Canadiens even series in playoffs

MONTREAL (AP) — Yvon Lambert, Guy Lafleur and Bob Gainey scored in a 7:53 span of the first period Tuesday night as Montreal shrugged off an early two-goal deficit and roared to a 6-2 triumph over the New York Rangers to tie their National Hockey League final playoff series.

Steve Shutt and Jacques Lemaire scored in the second period and Mark Napier completed a string of six consecutive Montreal goals in the third period as the Canadiens evened the best-of-seven set at 1-1.

The series shifts to Madison Square Garden for games three and four tonight and Saturday.

Tuesday's game got off to a wild start as Montreal goalie Ken Dryden gave up goals on two of New York's first three shots.

Y tests 'gasohol' for energy, volume effecency

By CRAIG NELSON
Universe Staff Writer

A mixture of gasoline and alcohol, called gasohol, is approximately five percent more efficient overall than standard gasoline, but lowers a typical automobile's miles-per-gallon average.

Geoff Germane, a mechanical engineer at BYU, said tests in the university's engine laboratory showed the feasibility of mixing 90 percent gasoline and 10 percent ethyl alcohol.

Germane explained the apparent contradiction of gasohol being more efficient and at the same time lowering an automobile's miles-per-gallon as being a result of the relatively higher energy efficiency of gasohol.

According to Germane, it takes more gasohol, on a volume basis, to get the same miles-per-gallon compared to an equal amount of gasoline, but in terms of efficiency gasohol is more efficient.

"People ought to think in terms of energy efficiency and not of volume efficiency. Unfortunately we pay by the volume," He added, however, "If we paid for fuel in terms of energy efficiency alcohol would be about half as much."

An earlier study on alcohol as a fuel was done in Nebraska with state-owned cars. The study compiled data on mileage and performance of the gasohol mixture. The experiments Germane is doing at BYU are essentially a computer duplication of the Nebraska experiment.

"Individual drivers make a substantial difference in actual road experience," Germane said. "Our driver is a highly-trained computer which only varies with the directions we provide. This provides a solid base with which to analyze the information."

Using the computer, the engine can be put through the same stresses and conditions an engine in an on-the-road test would experience. The computer has the added advantage of never deviating its speed or getting tired, he said.

"We can get back-to-back tests and see real comparisons. With the computer we can also make the engine think that it's pulling a two-, three- or four-thousand pound car with all the gears."

Based on the results of the study, Germane said alcohol could play an increasingly important part in the energy picture.

"Right now, I can see such a mixture being used in the Midwest where surplus grain can be converted to alcohol, and in the Northwest where scrap lumber can be used."

Because of the expense of gasohol production nationwide, Germane does not see the possibility of gasohol completely replacing gasoline.

"Gasohol will probably be a regional fuel," he said. "Regionally it could become cheaper than gasoline."

In New York gasohol has actually come into a reality. Monday, at Pilot Petroleum Associates stations in Long Island, gasohol went on sale at a price of 92.9 cents per gallon, 3 cents more than regular unleaded fuel. The president of Pilot said that first day sales were good with about 80 percent of the drivers asking for gasohol.

Germane said it is not complicated to make ethyl alcohol. "It's basically a fermentation process with either the grain or scrap lumber," he said. The alcohol mixed with the gasoline used in Long Island is distilled from a grain molasses and is supplied by a distillery in Philadelphia.

"One possible problem," said Germane, "is that sometimes alcohol has an adverse effect on car's carburetor causing the rubber parts to swell. This, however is a minor problem and probably very rare."

With only a 10 percent alcohol mixture in the gasoline most cars would not experience any problem or have to be recalibrated to burn the fuel.

"You could run gasohol at 100 percent alcohol with much more efficiency," he said, "but the carburetors would have to be replaced by carburetors for that fuel."

The testing laboratory uses a hydraulic device called a dynamometer, which is commonly used to "load an engine down" and simulate road conditions. When a driver down shifts his car it causes the engine to spin. The same thing happens when the engine is used to "brake" the car while going down a steep hill. Germane noted the BYU laboratory is possibly the only system that is capable of simulating this situation with the computer.

Germane is primarily responsible for the conception and design of the dynamometer which is connected to the computer.

Y institute given $75,000 grant

The BYU Institute of Professional Accountancy (IPA) has received a $75,000 grant from Ernst & Ernst, a national accounting firm.

The grant is to be used toward the development of the university's program of professional accounting education, tailored to the needs of students preparing for accounting careers.

According to K. Fred Skousen, director of the IPA program, the grant will be used for curriculum and course development, visiting professors and funding of practical experience and training for faculty members.

Ernst & Ernst has established a foundation of $1.25 million to fund a program to support professional schools of accounting. It is a national effort to foster the movement toward schools of professional accounting.

Pres. Dallin H. Oaks said the grant is "a valuable contribution to the continuing excellence of the university's accounting education."

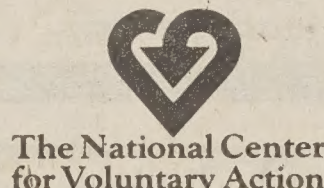

In designating BYU to receive the grant, Ernst & Ernst Managing Partner Ray J. Groves said, "Because of our extensive involvement with accounting education, we are convinced schools of professional accounting are needed to provide the environment required if counting education is to be responsive to current concerns rapid changes occur in the business world. We believe the BYU stitute provides such environment."

Mechanical engineer Geoff Germane sits at the control panel of a computerized automobile testing a mixture of gasoline and alcohol. Gasohol may soon be a realistic substitute for gasoline in times of shortages.

$30,000 grant presented to Y by Union Pacific

The School of Management has received a $30,000 contribution from the Union Pacific Foundation.

Steven A. Goodsell, Union Pacific general solicitor, and C. R. Rockwell, director of public relations, presented the check to Merrill J. Bateman, dean of the BYU School of Management.

The Union Pacific Foundation awards grants annually to institutions of higher education, health, social welfare and the arts. The grant to BYU is one of 23 made by the Foundation this year.

Bateman said the Union Pacific Foundation has been "a faithful friend to the university, hiring our graduates and providing on-going moral and financial support."

"THE AMERICAN SERVICE ECONOMY: DOING LESS WITH MORE"

Two thirds of the American working people now derive their income from producing services rather than goods. The Center of this growing service economy is the professions. As we multiply the number of professionals and broaden the area of their work, our well being does not seem to improve. Although we have more doctors, lawyers, social workers, teachers and allied professionals, there is no apparent improvement in our health, justice, family structure or education.

An analysis of the reason for the limited impact of professionals upon our modern problems suggests that they do not have the appropriate tools for problem solving. Their skills are technical while most of the critical issues relating to well being are political.

We have unique opportunities to renew America's problem solving capacities but they depend upon reversing the professional ideology and recognizing that political problems cannot be solved by the technical expertise of professionals.

community theater, I can 'get in the act'

BY TANNER
Staff Writer

community theater is
and well in Provo.
have ever wanted
ome involved with es but lacked the
the expertise or rrage, community
er may be the
for you.

Once a major form of local entertainment,
community theater
found itself gradually replaced by radio, motion pictures and finally, television.

But at least in Provo,
the need for community-based amateur entertainment is undergoing a nostalgic revival.

Keith and Jody Renstrom of Orem are two initiators of that comeback. Not satisfied with the quality of other local entertainment
such as movies and television, the Renstroms decided to form their own community theater.

Already having a rich
theatrical background,
the couple used their expertise and a little ingenuity to create what is easily the most stable community theater in the area, the Valley Center Theater.

"Our purpose in starting the theater was to bring good,
wholesome, family entertainment to Utah," says Keith Renstrom.
"If our viewers don't go away thoroughly entertained, spiritually uplifted or somewhat relieved from the cares of the world, we haven't met our objective."

'A good play'

Anyone can become involved in a community theater project.
Actors of all ages are invited to try out, as well as directors and playwrights. Because many of the theater's productions are based on original scripts, Jody Renstrom, as superviing director, says,

"We're always looking for a good play."

Mrs. Renstrom has written and starred in one play entitled
"Emma," a one-woman show depicting the life of Joseph Smith's wife.
Other plays the theater has produced include
"Clouds of Glory,"
"Celestial 2A," and most recently,
"Something's Gotta Go."

The performers,
though entertaining, are not expected to come off as Broadway stars. Both rehearsal and performance time runs five to six weeks each, requiring close to a three month commitment from participants. And the pay:
applause.

But participants are also paid in another way. Mrs. Renstrom, a mother of six, said that Valley Center Theater
has opened the stage door for many aspiring young actors.

"Tiffany de Adder got her start at Valley Center Theater when she was only six. Now, two years later, she has appeared on the Donny and Marie Show and the Donna Fargo Show," she said. Valley Center Theater was also the springboard for Danny Thompson, 15-year-old

Universe photo by Forrest Anderson

You don't have to be a star to be in this show! Valley Center Theater participants leave a normal life several times a week to walk the stage. Rehearsing a scene, from left, are: Jerry Ferguson, a Provo contractor; Marie Ludwig, a Geneva employee from Orem and Launa Renstrom, a ninth-grader at Lakeridge Junior High School in Orem.

actor in "The Great Brain."

Also important is the therapeutic function the Valley Center Theater
serves as to its participants. One recently widowed woman who starred in "Something's Gotta Go" said "this experience has brought me to life; it has given me something to live for."

Other local community theaters are the Villa Playhouse Theater in Springville and the Alhambra Theater in Pleasant Grove.

'Influence for good'

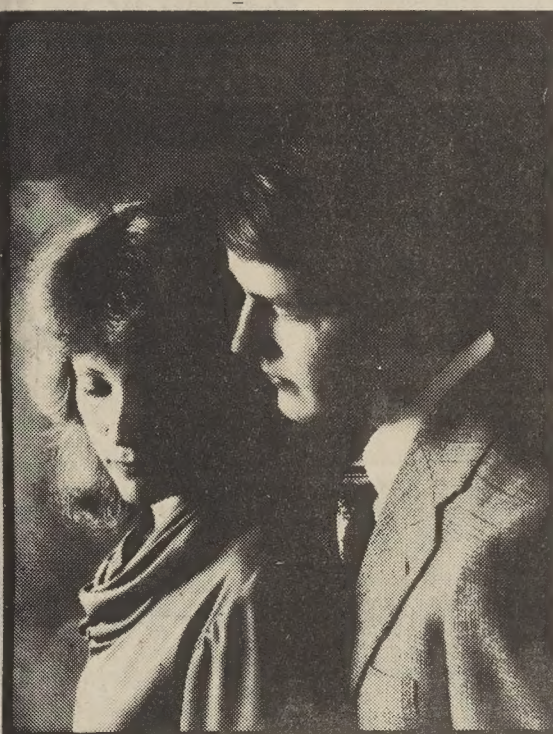

Whatever criticism
one may have about the lack of professionalism in the performances at these playhouses, that there is an influence for good both in communities and in individual lives cannot be disputed.

If there is a creative streak in you that is not met by merely watching, you may find that becoming involved with a community theater is a fresh approach to your view of the "stage of life."

And who knows, you may even be discovered.

Woodruff portrayal wins Y play contest

BYU graduate Joan Oviatt was awarded $1,000 for her play "The Field is White" in the LDS Ses-quicentennial New Play Contest, sponsored by the BYU Theater and Cinematic Arts Department. Miss Oviatt competed with 16 other entries.

The play, a portrayal of the struggles and triumphs of early LDS Church President Wilford Woodruff, will be produced during the 1980 Mormon Festival of Arts, honoring the 150th birthday of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Miss Oviatt's production, which will be directed by Dr. Charles Whitman, relates the missionary experiences of Wilford Woodruff, fourth president of the LDS Church. The play takes place in 1837 in the Fox Islands off the coast of Maine. Woodruff's keen sense of humor, unbending obedience and courage, and his close encounters with death are depicted in the play. Miss Oviatt's style lends an air of realism to the Woodruff account, according to contest officials.

Miss Oviatt, originally from Barstow, Calif., and currently a resident of Salt Lake city, received her master's degree in theater and cinematic arts from BYU in 1978.

Miss Oviatt has performed in more than 30 stage plays and films and now works for Security Pictures.

In addition to winning her first place prize, Miss Oviatt also authored the book and lyrics for the musical, "The Used Friend Lot," produced at BYU in August 1978.

Newstip winner

Bart Ward, a sophomore in communications from Las Vegas, Nev., is this week's Universe news tip winner.

Ward informed The Universe on May 4 that Joe Frazier was working out in the Smith Fieldhouse. The tip resulted in a feature article and photographs of the former heavyweight champion. He received a $15 cash award from the Universe.

News tip winners are chosen weekly by the editors of The Universe.

Disco street dance

There will be disco street dance in Provo this Saturday, May 19. The event, which is co-sponsored by the American Cancer Society and K-96 radio, will be on Center Street between First and Second West beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Dance contests and other competition with prizes will be featured during the evening, Ray Klauk, president of the Utah Valley Unit of the ACS, said. Admission is $3 per person or $5 per couple.

Is your car dirty?

Help us raise funds! The Latin branch is having a car wash this Saturday, May 19 at 3 p.m. The location is 900 W. 100 North in Provo. The cost is $1.50.

Swedish and Samoan tests

Language tests for credit for Swedish and Samoan will be administered this Saturday, May 19 at 9 a.m. in 246 B-34. The Swedish test will be administered for credit to non-BYU students only. However, Swedish RM's may take the test this Saturday, but they cannot obtain the credits until they take the upper division class. The Samoan test will be given to BYU and non-BYU students for credit. Students will be granted up to 16 hours of foreign language credit.

Credit is not available for native speakers of the language. Those desiring to take these tests must register with the secretary in 240 B-34 before 5 p.m. on Friday, May 18. There will be a $10 testing fee and an additional charge for the foreign language credits.

CPA Review Course

The next series of classes in the Becker CPA Review Course will begin Saturday, June 9 at Westminster College in Salt Lake.

Students taking the entire four-part course to prepare for the National CPA Exam attend classes eight hours a week for the first 13 weeks and 12 hours a week for the last nine weeks.

The first two classes of each course are offered free and without obligation. For additional information, call the local Becker CPA Review Course at 466-7341.

Gas lead relaxed by Lt. Gov. of Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — California's lieutenant governor signed an executive order Wednesday relaxing restrictions on the lead content of gasoline, saying the shortage of gasoline and lengthening lines at the pump called for immediate action.

Gov. Edmund G. Brown, who returned to the state hours after Lt. Gov. Mike Curb ordered the change, promptly issued a statement saying he would rescind the action.

As Brown flew back to California, he issued a terse statement through his press secretary, Bobbie Metzger.

"Earlier today, before Curb took his action, Gray Davis, the governor's chief of staff, advised Curb's top aide, Shel Lytton, that if the order were signed, it would be rescinded," Ms. Metzger said.

Brown was in Washington Wednesday for a meeting with President Carter.

Expanding programs

Award recognizes teachers

Clayne L. Pope, associate professor of economics and Larry T. Wimmer, professor of economics, have received an award for "excellence in private enterprise education" from the Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge.

The award recognizes high school and college faculty members who have developed outstanding new or expanded programs giving students a better understanding of the American private enterprise economic system.

They received the award for their work in two courses, Economics 110 and Social Science 100. Economics 110 had previously been a two-semester course geared to business majors. They developed it into a one-semester course with emphasis on the market as an institution that affects the lives of everyone. "At the end of the course students should understand the market in which they live, work and buy," Wimmer said.

They also helped develop the Social Science 100 course which is one-third economics, one-third history and one-third political science. The interdisciplinary course takes concepts learned in the three areas and applies them to American heritage.

Their work in these two courses was recognized as an achievement in extending the freedom philosophy of Americanism.

Freedoms Foundation publicity says it is an educational and research center for teachers who seek a better understanding of the American constitutional form of government. The awards program is designed to honor with incentive awards individuals, schools, organizations and corporations that most effectively advance those concepts.

Robert W. Miller, president of Freedoms Foundation, presented the two professors with a check for $5,000 and a plaque. The award for "excellence in private enterprise education" was first given last year at the annual awards ceremonies. The award is one of 17 presented in ceremonies this year at national headquarters at Valley Forge, Penn. May 10.

Freedoms Foundation publicity states that it recognizes individuals, organizations and schools annually for activities which build good citizenship.

Foundation spokesmen say its purpose is to create and build an understanding of the spirit and philosophy of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights and of our indivisible "bundle" of political and economic freedoms inherent in them.

Proposed health plan called 'unacceptable'

By JOHN R. LAUCK
Universe Staff Writer

The Utah Hospital Association Executive Vice President, Richard B. Kinnerly, says he "welcomes Sen. Edward Kennedy's (D-Mass) new approach to National Health Insurance as a more realistic, yet still unacceptable approach to health care for the citizens of Utah and the nation."

Kennedy called on President Carter last Monday to join him in an effort "to make quality health care a right for all our people," as he introduced his national health insurance legislation.

If passed by Congress, the legislation would guarantee hospital and doctor care at set fees to all Americans regardless of income. The plan, which would cost

Americans $32 billion a year, would be financed by employer-employee premiums, with the employer paying at least 65 percent of the employee's premium costs.

"We perceive with the new Kennedy plan a movement toward the middle by Sen. Kennedy and for us that's healthy and it means he's heard our complaints about the more socialized approach he has supported for the past 10 years," Kinnerly said.

"However, the new plan is still much too expensive and proposes to reorder the country's entire health care delivery and payment system in order to benefit a very small segment of the population which is not currently covered by a health care protection plan. Ninety percent of the U.S. population, according to HEW and Congressional research, is covered by Blue Cross/Blue Shield, private insurance carriers, health maintenance organizations, Medicare or Medicaid. It, therefore, appears that the $32 billion Kennedy plan would topple the current system of health care — which is obviously 90 percent effective — in order to meet the needs of the other 10 percent," Kinnerly continued.
